Season five's second half will follow the aftermath of the Battle of the Kattegat. The new series will see unlikely alliances formed as a new battle begins with vikings fighting each other. Here's what you need to know about the new series. Vikings season five, Del B will premiere on Wednesday, November 28. Amazon Prime will release the next installment, which is the mid-season premiere in the UK on (November, 29). Season five, Part B will consist of 10 episodes, just like the first half of the season. Fans of the History show have been waiting for nearly a full year for the second half of the race after the Vikings went on a midseason break in February. VIKINGS SEASON 5, PART 2 RELEASE TIME Vikings season 5, episode 11 will see Lagertha stewing and want revenge (Image: HISTORY)WARNING: This article contains spoilers from Vikings season 5, episode 10.US broadcaster The story has released some promos hinting at what to expect from the midseason opener. Not only have fans received a poster of Ivar being crowned with something made of bones, but a number of promotional videos have also been released. The story dropped a trailer for Vikings season five, part B at San Diego Comic-Con that hinted at Lagertha's death. There have also been hints that the ruthless Ivar the Boneless could face a sticky end. Episode 11 of season five was previously expected to premiere in August. Fans have already got a taste of what to expect in the second half of season five. Episode 11 will pick up from the shocking midseason finale, Moments of Vision and the Battle of Kattegat.VIKINGS SEASON 5 RETURN DATE (Image: HISTORY)The midseason premiere - episode 11 - is called The Revelation.A short promo clip released not long after Moments of Vision and showed that things didn't look good for Lagertha (played by Katheryn Winnick). Apart from that, all other details about Vikings season five, episode 11 has been kept under wraps. The trailer started with The Seer (John Kavanagh) ominously prophesying on the battlefield. The war is not over, he said, as scenes of carnage played out with two armies confronting each other. The sense of foreboding was amplified further as another voice announced: We are all going to go into darkness. VIKINGS SEASON 5, PART 2 RELEASE DATE UKIvar (Alex Høgh Andersen) was silhouetted against a fiery fire behind him, suggesting that it didn't look good for his enemies. The scene cut to Ivar sitting on a throne as he proclaimed to a crowd: People of the Kattegat, we have a great sacrifice. He then delivers the killer line as a prisoner is brought forward: This is Lagertha. Episode 11 could see possible death of character and now deposed Queen Lagertha (Katheryn Winnick). Lagertha's death would make sense because of her history with Ivar. The toppled queen killed Ivar's mother Aslaug (Alyssa Sutherland) and he has always sought revenge for the murder. VIKINGS SEASON 6 RELEASE DATE Ivar has a prisoner in Vikings season 5, episode 11 (Picture: HISTORY)Talking about the second half of season five of the Vikings, creator Michael Hirst told Variety. With Ivar having defeated his brothers and got the Kattegat, some of the heroes end up in Wessex seeking safety from Ivar. This season is very much Ivar in ascendant. Hirst went on to tease the return of Rollo (Clive Standen) saying: You have to find out why he has returned. He has returned for a very special reason - a reason that goes a long way back to the first season of the show. There are unresolved problems in his personal life with his brother and Lagertha, and these are problems that he still wants to deal with. Episode 10 saw the deaths of some great figures, including Astrid (Josefin Asplund) and Halldan (Jasper Pääkkönen). The second half of season five looks to continue with some potentially deadly games. HOW TO WATCH VIKINGS SEASON 5 ONLINE Floki and his people are set for tragedy in Vikings season 5 (Image: HISTORY)In an exclusive interview with Express.co.uk Vikings creator Michael Hirst teased that it was not positive for Floki (Gustaf Skarsgard), who was on the verge of sacrificing himself. The whole Icelandic adventure becomes quite bleak and ultimately extremely tragic in ways that even now you can't quite foresee, he explained. Hirst went on to say: Floki has put his life on the line for this settlement and to live in the land of the gods. He has a distinctly nasty surprise waiting for him around the corner, which I can't really reveal. On top of that, the acclaimed author explained about Ivar's reign: This is a huge shock to the system that Ivar has conquered the Kattegat. His reign is going to be extremely provocative. He almost instigates a reign of terror in the Kattegat. It's a provocative rule, it's unhappy for the cat-gat people, and it doesn't end happily.' There have also been suggestions that Ivar the Boneless could kill Lagertha, with Hirst teasing that terrible things happen to shieldmaidens.IS RAGNAR LOTHBROK RETURNING TO VIKINGS? Vikings season 5, episode 11 will air later in 2018 (Image: HISTORY)An airdate for the second half of season five has been announced as November 28 in US.UK fans can watch the episode on November 29.Episodes will air on a weekly basis with each installment hitting screens in the UK and then in The Britain Season went on its mid-season hiatus in April 2016 before returning in November of that year. VIKINGS SEASON 5 RECAP - Season six of the Vikings was confirmed last year by the History network. The show will return for another 20 episodes that will be split in two again. Production on season six is now underway on site in Ireland, serves as the base of the show. Hirst also recently spoke about the end of the epic show and admitted he had some ideas. Vikings season 5 returns to Amazon Prime Video on May 29. Edit: The new king of Kattegat Ivar hunts for Lagertha, Bjorn and Ubbe. Out of the blue, Rollo visits the Kattegat to propose an agreement with Ivar. He goes to the place where Lagertha, Bjorn and Ubbe are hidden and offer shelter to them and make a surprising revelation to Lagertha and Bjorn. It's been a long wait, but in the end we're here. Welcome to the recap of Episode 11 (titled The Revelation) of the Season 5B premiere of the Vikings. SPOILER ALERT: This recap contains information about Episode 11 (titled The Revelation) of the History Channel's Vikings Season 5. Please proceed with caution if you have not yet watched this episode and want to avoid spoilers. Episode 11 of Vikings Season 5B deals with the fallout of the massive loss of the Kattegat to Ivar the Boneless (Alex Høgh Andersen). Lagertha (Katheryn Winnick) and her group have literally run for their lives after discovering Duke Rollo (Clive Standen) has side with Ivar. Now they are hiding in the hills and planning their action. Heahmund (Jonathan Rhys Meyers) suggests they go to England, that he will vouch for them there, but the Vikings are a little unsure how reliable Heahmund is. Lagertha seems to have more faith in him than the other Vikings do, but she's still worried that he might betray them. Ivar, Hvitserk (Marco Ilo) and Harald Finehair (Peter Franzen) revel in the fact that they have claimed the Kattegat. Rollo, however, shows up and tells them the bad news - they now owe him big time. Of course, it's too late now for negotiations since Rollo has already helped them in the victory. Rollo also has an extra incentive - he knows where the Lagertha group is hiding. Jonathan Hession / History Channel He knows this because he has already been visiting Lagertha at the old place they once sheltered from Jarl Borg (Thorbjorn Harr). He blusters in and tells Lagertha that he loves her and that her group wants safe if they decide. As previously suggested by Vikings creator Michael Hirst to Metro, Rollo also reveals to Bjorn Ironside (Alexander Ludwig) that he thinks he is Bjorn's father, that he and Lagertha had a moment all those years ago. However, Bjorn points out that it doesn't really matter, because in addition to looking completely like Ragnar (Travis Fimmel), he also believes that he has Ragnar's qualities, as opposed to the treacherous Rollo. So it is decided that the Vikings go to England and take their chances there. Rollo responds by telling Ivar where Lagertha's group lives, when Ivar agrees to his trade agreements. Jonathan Hession / History Channel It's no surprise, but when Ivar shows up and Lagertha group has cleared out. Only Margrethe (Da Marie Nielsen) is left, and that's because she's completely succumbed to madness. Hvitserk, however, seems happy to see her and claims her own. Meanwhile, in Sussex, Alfred (Ferdia Walsh-Peelo) has problems of his own. He has just announced that he wants the Church to provide religious teaching in English rather than Latin, and now the Church does not like him at all. Alfred distracts them by reminding everyone that the Vikings are still attacking and putting his brother, Aethelred (Darren Cahill), in charge of sorting out that problem. This is convenient because it means that the Vikings come with Heahmund. As a result, the group is safely transported to see King Alfred. Jonathan Hession / History Channel Judith (Jennie Jacques) also sets about securing Alfred's future by starting to wife-act for her son in the hope that heirs will be produced. Finally, Episode 11 of Vikings Season 5B also delves into Flokis (Gustaf Skarsgard) problems in Iceland. The last viewers saw was that Floki offered himself as a human sacrifice to end all the quarrels between his group. As expected, the group is divided down the middle regarding Floki's sacrifice. In the end, however, it was the voice of a single person, as of Eyvind's (Kris Holden-Ried) son, who decided Floki's fate. Although it seems that Floki may have to sacrifice himself, it turns out that Eyvind's son is actually on Floki's side. The Vikings return Wednesday, December 5, at 9 p.m. ET/PT. The History Channel provides the following synopsis for Episode 12 (titled Murder Most Foul). Bjorn, Lagertha, and Ubbe face an uncertain fate with which Heahmund's loyalty is tested. In Iceland, Floki struggles to understand the will of the gods. In the catgat, Ivar may have met his struggle.
